Dear Dean East:

STAT
STAT
The Central Intelligence Agency is pleased to learn that the School of International Affairs at George Washington University is interested in accepting an Officer-in-Residence as part of its faculty. Our nominee to your school is [redacted]. From your recent discussion with her and from the curriculum vitae that she is going to send you, I am sure that you will agree that [redacted] is a very qualified officer and will fit into your program with ease.

The Central Intelligence Agency's Officer-in-Residence Program provides the opportunity for senior-level officers to disengage from their normal duties by fully participating in the academic life, including research and teaching. The Officer-in-Residence is identified as a CIA officer. Our expectation is that the officer, by his presence, will demonstrate the quality of CIA people and our commitment to providing U.S. leaders with the very best intelligence we can. The program also serves to strengthen our professional ties to a fertile and indispensable source of ideas and technical expertise and to enhance CIA's recruiting efforts by providing an opportunity for experienced officers to serve as role models, to counsel interested students on career opportunities with CIA, and to respond to concerns students may have about the Agency and the intelligence profession.

The university will gain an officer who can effectively provide practical knowledge and experience to the institution and students. The officer is assigned without cost to your institution. All funds are provided by the Central Intelligence Agency.
